Parental Blindness

Air Date: January 16, 2019

Ron: Have you ever noticed a parent turning a blind eye to their child's poor behavior?

Announcer: For FamilyLife Blended®, here's Ron Deal.

Ron: I know I have. Then it occurred to me one reason we close our eyes to our own kid's behavior is because we are used to it. We don't even notice it but, boy, other people sure do.

In blended families, sometimes a stepparent notices a child's misbehavior and the biological parent doesn't. If the stepparent says something about it, the biological parent might get defensive. This is a real trap because it pits you against one another as a couple. God intended parenting to at least be a two-person team partly because we all have strengths and weaknesses and blind spots. So, put down your defensiveness and listen to each other. For FamilyLife Blended I'm Ron Deal.
