Guidelines for Good Meetings

Air Date: January 28, 2019

Ron: A good co-parent meeting is worth its weight in gold.

Announcer: For FamilyLife Blended®, here's Ron Deal.

Ron: Divided or divorced parents need effective business-like meetings in order to raise kids well. Here are some guidelines from the book Two Homes, One Childhood by Robert Emery.

Have a regularly scheduled meeting and keep it as often as you can. Save most topics for the meeting; don't text or make an extra call unless you need to. And make sure the kids can't overhear your conversations. They don't need to be burdened by the topics which means pick up and drop off times are not a good time to talk. And keep meetings brief, polite, and to the best of your ability, positive. Good meetings are a gift to your kids. For FamilyLife Blended I'm Ron Deal.
