Finding Agreement

Air Date: July 8, 2019

Ron: Talking about problems, is sometimes problematic.

Announcer: For FamilyLife Blended®, here's Ron Deal.

Ron: I saw it again the other day. Online advice suggesting the way to resolve your parenting differences is by talking more. The assumption here is that talking more will lead to unity. Well, talking is the first step but if that doesn't lead to agreement, talking more will only lead to more disagreement.

With parenting you've got to come together around a practical plan that you can implement. If you can't find agreement together involve a third party. Now that third party could be the Bible, a person, a conference or a resource that points you to what good parenting looks like. So, your talking moves you towards unity. For FamilyLife Blended I'm Ron Deal.
