Big Mistake 1: No Blueprint

Air Date: March 17, 2020

Ron: Have you ever tried to build a home without a blueprint?

Announcer: For FamilyLife Blended®, here's Ron Deal.

Ron: Ahh, no. That would be a big mistake. But nearly as bad, some couples start to build their stepfamily home with a biological family blueprint. That just doesn't make sense. For example, the role of a stepparent is very different than a biological parent, use the wrong blueprints and everything falls down. But blended family blueprints make sense of the differences and how loss affects kids, holiday stress, between home conflicts...the list goes on and on.

Yes, stepfamilies need blueprints designed for stepfamilies. Follow those plans and the foundation, the walls, the roof of your home will be solid. For FamilyLife Blended, I'm Ron Deal.
