Traditions Put Down Deep Roots

Air Date: October 13, 2021

Ron: When you establish family traditions, you put down deep roots.

Announcer: For FamilyLife Blended®, here's Ron Deal.

Ron: Family traditions can be simple: saying hello or goodbye in a special way, Friday movie and pizza night, or an annual camping trip. But traditions have a profound impact: they create bonds, communicate values, and foster shared experiences and memories. Researchers have even found that family rituals and traditions reduce anxiety and depression in teens, and have a protective effect on their self-esteem and well-being.

In blended families, repeated fun activities and traditions help to form family bonds and define what it means to be part of this family. So, be intentional—make it a tradition to keep your traditions. For FamilyLife Blended I'm Ron Deal.
